Introducing the CHAMP Community

Have you had the opportunity to visit the CHAMP Community at the newly redesigned web site? In this online community, you will find Forums and Ask an Expert blogs where home care professionals just like you come together to interact with each other around the clock, each and every day. Participate in the community today by clicking here.

Connect in the CHAMP Forums

The CHAMP Community Forums allow you to connect with other home care professionals, including frontline nurse managers, quality improvement staff and others who are interested in advancing home care excellence. There are even experts in geriatric care who regularly post relevant information and will reply to your questions.

Stop by today and see what others are discussing in categories such as "Quality Improvement," "What's New in Home Care?," and "Building Your Team." You can even get involved by posting your own topic or question! Topics in the Forums right now include PT Breathing Programs, Preventing Rehospitalization, and Looking for Incontinence Tips. Come on in and tell us how your organization handles these issues, share your successes or get tips and ideas from colleagues who are facing the same challenges.

Ask an Expert Blogs

Have you heard that propoxyphene products are dangerous? Come see what Dennee Frey, Pharm D, CHAMP Medication Management and Safety Expert has to say about them in our Ask an Expert blogs here.

Ask an Expert blogs include advice and opinions from a team of CHAMP Faculty including Jane Taylor, EdD, MHA, MA who specializes in Quality Improvement and Ms. Frey. You can ask questions or submit ideas about home care news, research, and policies for these experts to address in future blogs. Simply post your question or comment to the "Ask an Expert" topics in the CHAMP Forums here.

What is CHAMP?

CHAMP is the Collaboration for Homecare Advances in Management and Practice and has been improving geriatric home care nationally for the past three years via educational programs in medication and pain management for frontline nurse managers. The new CHAMP web site includes an interactive Community of Practice and is the first online national forum to motivate and support quality improvement efforts by home care organizations and other interested stakeholders.

What are Forums?

An online forum (also known as a discussion or message board) is a web site where interested individuals can join together and interact by posting or replying to short topics or questions from other forum members. Traditionally, all site visitors are able to read content within a forum, but need to register to fully participate.

What are Blogs?

Blogs (also known as weblogs or online journals) are web sites where one or several special users contribute periodic commentary, opinions, and editorials that are available to read and comment on by the other registered site users.
